

Trade Advisory and Alert

Effective today, March 4, 2025, additional duties are due on imports from Canada, Mexico and China

Canada and Mexico

Products of Canada were imposed additional duties in Executive Order 14193 on February 1st 2025 and amended by Executive Order 14197 on March 2nd.

Effective today, goods that are the product of Canada entered for consumption in the U.S. will be assessed an additional ad valorem rate of duty of 25%.

Imports of energy, energy resources or critical minerals will be assessed an additional ad valorem duty rate of 10%.

Products eligible for free entry under the USMCA trade agreement are subject to the additional duties.

The only exclusions are donations and informational materials such as publications, films, books, artworks, and audio recordings.

Products of Mexico were imposed additional duties in Executive order 14194 on February 1st 2025 and amended by Executive Order 14198 on March 2nd. The ad valorem additional duty rate for all imports from Mexico are 25%.

Similarly to Canadian imports, USMCA qualifying goods will be assessed the 25%, and the only product exclusions are donated articles and informational materials.

China

In February President Trump signed an Executive Order levying an additional 10% duty rate on imports from China. Yesterday he amended this order to increase this additional duty rate from 10% to 20%.

This duty rate is in addition to the regular duty rate and to the Section 301 duties which, if applicable, range between 7.5%-100% of the value of the goods.

The trade situation is changing daily. We will continue to provide updates and guidance as changes occur. Please feel free to contact us with questions or concerns.
